

Brand Standards Guide

Wearable, souvenirs, one city at a time.

College Town Tees is a collegiate apparel brand that celebrates the culture, landmarks, and spirit of college towns across America. Each collection is city-specific — hand-illustrated campus landmarks on the back, the college town name embroidered on the front — creating wearable souvenirs that feel local, not mass-produced.

Inspiration

The idea draws from a familiar sight on every college campus in America: the frat tee rotation. Every fraternity member owns a week's worth of shirts — logo on the front, a graphic on the back tied to their chapter or school. C-Town Tees takes that same energy and elevates it — replacing the frat emblem with a city-specific wordmark, swapping the basic screen print for embroidery, and designing back graphics that tap into real school traditions rather than inside jokes. The result is a shirt that any student or alum would be proud to wear, not just on campus, but anywhere.

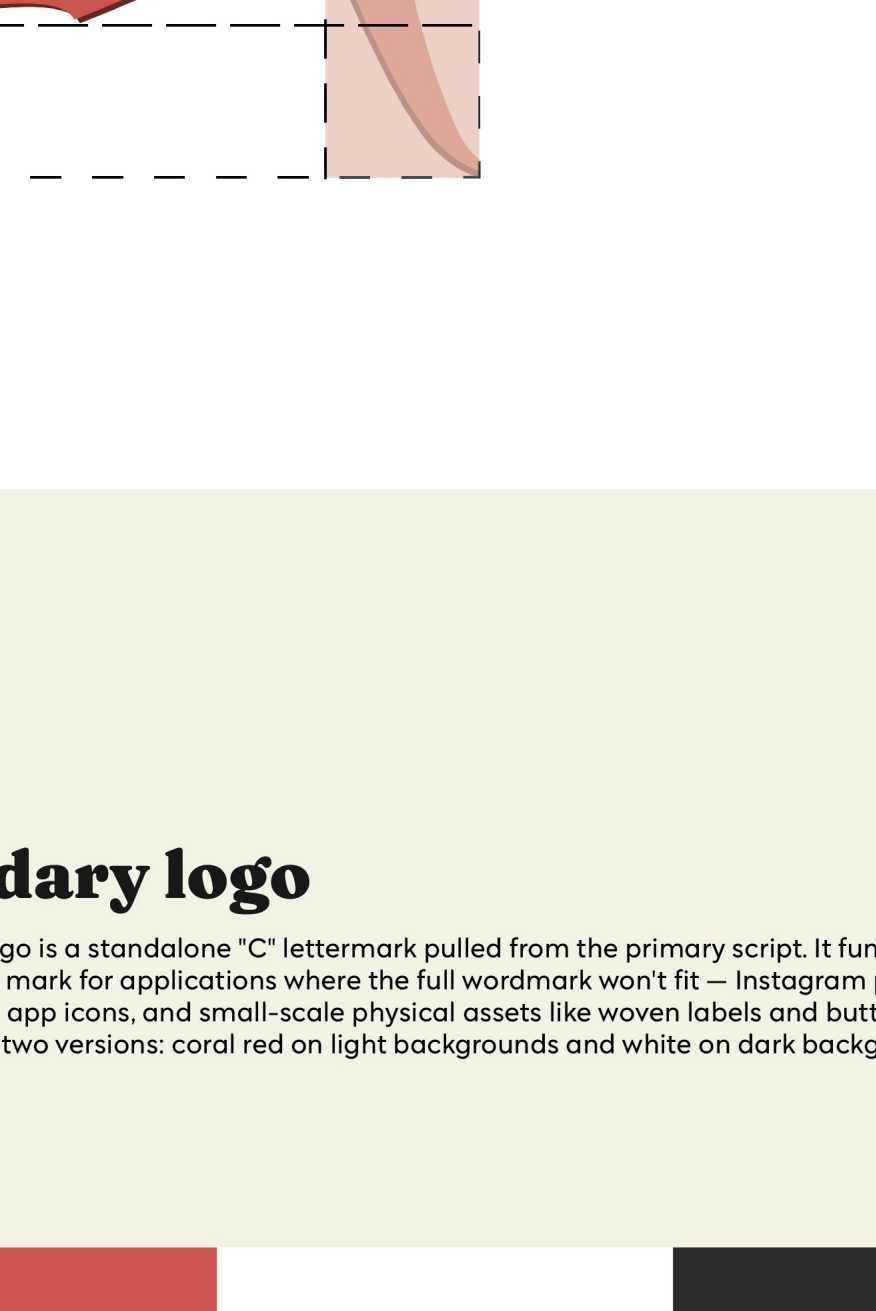

Local Pride — Every design is rooted in a specific place and its culture. Creating an emotional connection with each design and their students.

Craftsmanship — Hand-illustrated graphics. No stock art, no clip-and-paste school logos. Every element is original.

The brand exists at the intersection of local pride and varsity nostalgia. Where other collegiate brands slap a logo on a blank tee, C-Town tells a story one city at a time.

Primary Logo

The C-Town Tees logo is a custom script wordmark inspired by vintage baseball typography, the kind of hand-lettered scripts found on classic athletic tees and old pennants. The design connects to the collegiate and vintage feel at the core of the brand, evoking nostalgia for an older generation while presenting itself as a classic for the younger one.

The typeface is built on a brush script base that has been heavily edited — a custom-drawn "C," adjusted letterforms, and a hand-designed tail that gives the logo its athletic sweep. The primary logo represents the brand as a whole, while the city-specific wordmarks carry the identity of each individual collection.

Logo Variation

The primary logo appears in coral red on light backgrounds and reverses to white on dark backgrounds. Ensure sufficient contrast at all times.

The logo should never appear in individual school colors — it always stays in brand red or white to maintain separation between the parent brand and the city-specific collections.

Spacing

Maintain clear space around the logo equal to the height of the tail on all sides. The tail is part of the logo and falls within this boundary. The logo should never feel crowded or compressed.

Secondary logo

The secondary logo is a standalone "C" lettermark pulled from the primary script. It functions as the brand's compact mark for applications where the full wordmark won't fit — Instagram profile icons, website favicons, app icons, and small-scale physical assets like woven labels and button pins. The mark is shown in two versions: coral red on light backgrounds and white on dark backgrounds.

Collor Pallette

The C-Town Tees palette is built around nostalgia. The faded coral red, soft cream, and muted black create a vintage, worn-in feel that connects to the brand's collegiate roots — old varsity letters, faded pennants, and the kind of colors that look like they've been around for decades.

You can use black or varsity red for text on white and cream background

White
250 250 250
#ffffff

Vintage Cream
238 236 245
#fede3

You can use white or cream for text on either of the red backgrounds

Light Red
203 68 79
#eb544f

Varsity Red
197 69 60
#a64541

The palette is intentionally warm and approachable, avoiding the harsh primary colors that most collegiate brands default to. It feels classic without feeling dated.

Faded Black
25 25 25
#181919

Bold Collegient, Modern.

Rockwell Regular steps in for subheadings with a sturdy, slab-serif presence that grounds the layout and bridges the display and body hierarchy. Gravita HUM Medium handles body copy — clean, modern, and highly legible at small sizes, letting the illustrations and wordmarks carry the brand's visual personality.

Headers

Use for headlines and section titles. Its warm serif character adds editorial weight to layouts while staying approachable and readable.

Fraunces Black

Madison, Wisconsin
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0 ! @ # $ % & ?

Subheaders

Use for subheadings, product details, and secondary titles. Its structure provides a sturdy foundation that complements the script.

Rockwell Regular

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0 ! @ # $ % & ?

Copy

Use for body text, product descriptions, and supporting copy. Clean and neutral, keeping focus on the graphics.

Gravita HUM medium

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0 ! @ # $ % & ?

City-Specific Wordmarks

Each college town gets its own wordmark in the brand's signature script style with athletic tail. These are the logos for each individual city, built on the same brush script base as the C-Town primary logo, but customized with and-drawn first letters, unique tails, and the school's colors.

University Of Wisconsin-Madison

The city wordmarks function as the face of each collection, appearing embroidered on the front of every garment.

The cow print variant of the Madison wordmark connects directly to the culture of Wisconsin — the dairy state, the campus surrounded by farmland, the identity that students and locals carry with pride.

University Of Tennessee-Knoxville

A school and brand known for their vibrant orange palette, I wanted to embrace that color, knowing its cultural meaning to the school.

The checkerboard variant of the Knoxville wordmark draws from one of the most iconic traditions in college football — the checker pattern that fills Neyland Stadium on game day.

Dynamic, Eye Catching, Authentic.

Each city's back graphic features a hand-illustrated stadium or campus landmark rendered in bold, flat colors with dynamic perspective. The illustrations use the school's official colors and incorporate signature patterns — stripes, checkers — as environmental elements that fill the composition with energy and school spirit.

Illustration Style

Madison

Camp Randall Stadium during a Stripe Out game the crowd divided into alternating red and white sections that radiate outward from the field. The illustration captures the energy of the tradition from an exaggerated aerial perspective, with the grey Wisconsin sky overhead and the "Madison" wordmark floating above the scene.

Knoxville

Neyland Stadium wrapped in Tennessee's signature checkerboard pattern, with the Smoky Mountains rising behind the field. The illustration uses a dynamic perspective, combines with the orange-and-white checkerboard pattern.

Brand Identity

The mockup system shows the full C-Town Tees product experience. City wordmarks are embroidered on the front of each garment — real thread, not screen print — establishing quality from the first touch.

Vintage Nostalgic, Hand Crafted.

Back graphics span the upper back in full color, bringing each city's stadium illustration to life at scale.

Dynamic, Eye Catching, Authentic.

For packaging, we use a plain bag with the city logo on the side. It's clean and stands out.

