

Brand Standards Guide

Wearable souvenirs. One city at a time.

College Town Tees is a collegiate apparel brand that celebrates the culture, landmarks, and spirit of college towns across America. Each collection includes a city-specific and hand-illustrated campus landmarks on the back, with the college town name embroidered on the front. Creating wearable souvenirs that feel local, not mass-produced.

Inspiration

The idea came from a sight on every college campus: the frat tee rotation. Logo on the front, graphic on the back, a different shirt for every day of the week. C-Town takes that format and rebuilds it. The frat emblem becomes a city wordmark. The screen print becomes embroidery. The back graphics swap each school's traditions. The result is a shirt that works on campus, and works off it.

Local Pride — Local Pride. Every design is tied to a specific place. The goal is for students and locals to recognize their town in the work.

Craftsmanship — Hand-illustrated graphics. No stock art, or plain school logos. Every element is original.

C-Town sits between local pride and varsity nostalgia. Most collegiate brands stop at putting a logo on a blank tee. C-Town goes further. Every shirt is built around a specific city.

Primary Logo

The logo is a custom script wordmark, drawn in the style of old baseball typography. It pulls from the lettering you'd find on classic athletic tees and faded pennants. Familiar to anyone who grew up with that look. New to anyone who didn't.

The typeface is built on a brush script base that has been heavily edited. It uses a custom-drawn "C," adjusted letterforms, and a hand-designed tail that gives the logo its athletic sweep. The primary logo represents the brand as a whole, while the city-specific wordmarks carry the identity of each individual collection.

Logo Variation

The primary logo appears in coral red on light backgrounds and reverses to white on dark backgrounds. Ensure sufficient contrast at all times.

The logo should never appear in individual school colors — it always stays in brand red or white to maintain separation between the parent brand and the city-specific collections.

Spacing

Maintain clear space around the logo equal to the height of the tail on all sides. The tail is part of the logo and falls within this boundary. The logo should never feel crowded or compressed.

Secondary logos

The secondary logo is a standalone "C" lettermark pulled from the primary script. It functions as the brand's compact mark for applications where the full wordmark won't fit. For instance Instagram profile icons, website favicons, app icons, and small-scale physical assets like woven labels and button pins.

The mark is shown in two versions: light red on light backgrounds and white on dark backgrounds.

Color Palette

The palette is built for nostalgia. Faded coral red, soft cream, and muted black. Colors that look like they've been pulled off an old varsity jacket or a pennant from someone's grandfather's closet. Warm and approachable on purpose. None of the harsh primaries you see on most collegiate brands.

You can use black or varsity red for text on white and cream background

White
250 250 250
#ffffff

Vintage Cream
238 236 225
#fefed3

You can use white or cream for text on either of the red backgrounds

Light Red
203 84 79
#cb544f

Varsity Red
167 69 66
#a64541

The palette is intentionally warm and approachable, avoiding the harsh primary colors that most collegiate brands default to. It feels classic without feeling dated.

Faded Black
25 25 25
#181919

Bold Collegiate, Modern.

Brand Typefaces

Three typefaces, three jobs. Fraunces Black runs the headlines. Warm serif, editorial weight, doesn't fight the script logo. Rockwell Regular handles subheads. Sturdy slab-serif. Gravita HUM Medium does the body copy. Clean, modern, small enough to stay out of the way.

College Town Tees

Rockwell Regular steps in for subheadings with a sturdy, slab-serif presence that grounds the layout and bridges the display and body hierarchy. Gravita HUM Medium handles body copy serving as a clean, modern, and highly legible at small sizes, letting the illustrations and wordmarks carry the brand's visual personality.

Headers

Use for headlines and section titles. Its warm serif character adds editorial weight to layouts while staying approachable and readable.

Fraunces Black

Madison, Wisconsin
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0 ! @ # $ % & ?

Subheaders

Use for subheadings, product details, and supporting copy. Clean and neutral, provides a sturdy foundation that complements the script.

Rockwell Regular

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0 ! @ # $ % & ?

Copy

Use for body text, product descriptions, and supporting copy. Clean and neutral, keeping focus on the graphics.

Gravita HUM medium

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0 ! @ # $ % & ?

City-Specific Wordmarks

Each college town gets its own wordmark in the brand's signature script style with athletic tail. These are the logos for each individual city, built on the same brush script base as the C-Town primary logo, but customized with hand-drawn first letters, unique tails, and the school's colors.

University Of Wisconsin-Madison

The city wordmarks function as the face of each collection, appearing embroidered on the front of every garment.

The cow print variant of the Madison wordmark connects directly to the culture of Wisconsin. Connecting to an identity that students and locals can carry with pride.

University Of Tennessee-Knoxville

A school and brand known for their vibrant orange palette, I wanted to embrace that color, knowing its cultural meaning to the school.

The checkerboard variant of the Knoxville wordmark draws from the checker pattern that fills Neyland Stadium on game day.

Dynamic, Eye Catching, Authentic.

Each city's back graphic features a hand-illustrated stadium or campus landmark rendered in bold, flat colors with dynamic perspective. The illustrations use the school's official colors and incorporate signature patterns as environmental elements that fill the composition with energy and school spirit.

Illustration Style

Madison

Camp Randall during a Stripe Out game. The crowd splits into alternating red and white sections that radiate out from the field. The view is from above with a grey Wisconsin sky overhead and the Madison wordmark sitting above it all.

Knoxville

Neyland Stadium wrapped in Tennessee's signature checkerboard pattern, with the Smoky Mountains rising behind the field. The illustration uses a dynamic perspective, combines with the orange-and-white checkered pattern.

Brand Identity

The modcup system shows the full C-Town Tees product experience. City wordmarks are embroidered on the front of each garment with real thread, not screen print. Establishing quality from the first touch.

Vintage Nostalgic, Hand Crafted.

Back graphics span the upper back in full color, bringing each city's stadium illustration to life at scale.

Dynamic, Eye Catching, Authentic.

For packaging, a plain bag with the city logo on the side. It's clean and stands out.

